THE BEST WAY TO KEEP

FLAT WORKS OF ART FOR A LONG TIME
OR TO SHIP THEM -

ALBOX Polypropylene Solander Boxes
That meet SUSTAINABILITY standards

Daniel Solander, who sailed with Captain Cook, originally designed these clamshell style boxes. It is understood that he designed them for the shipment of botanic specimens back to England. Whilst there have been many variations in shape and size, the basic design has endured.

The construction materials of buckram and board were the best options – until now!

With polypropylene, a new clamshell design has been developed. Because of the design and the rigidity of the polypropylene these new boxes can be flat and large. They are individually made to custom sizes. They provide new options for the storage and shipment of paintings.
